Waugh. I totally cry at weddings. Including these, and I don't even know these people.

Yes. Not just tears for her own happiness, but for her happiness for those two women who have been together for so long, to finally be able to publicly acknowledge that in the way that our culture had kept reserved for male/female couples only.

Hell, I was seeing pictures posted online that day, and I cried.

Oh, thanks for making me cry while everyone else is taking PSSAs. I'm sure my whole homeroom thinks I'm crazy now...

(But seriously. Thanks.)

I thought at the time that if they could do that, I could probably do anything I wanted, if I tried hard enough.

Fifty-one years. I think about what the world was like when they met, and--whoa.

I know. It makes it seem like -- well, the things they must have faced were so incredible, how could I possibly back down?

Wow. Just wow. I saw a lot of pics from that day but missed that one. That's just beautiful.

And got me teary-eyed, too!

Huh. I notice lots and lots of no Harpy on the Internet tonight.

Guess she didn't burn the duck.

Or if she did, T. is letting her make up for it...

burn the duck = blues euphemism, by the way.

Get off the internet. You're supposed to be shackled up.

Have pity, woman. I'm old.

But Liz isn't. Oops! Possible error in planning.

You can always send her over here if you're too tired to be good company...
